

Sensual Siblings

Written by Arian Mabe (Amethyst Mare)

Bursting from the water, the wildcat gasped for air, lungs working furiously after being underwater for too long. He shook water from his ears and blinked up at the sun, gaze sweeping the gently lapping waves that stretched around him. Its gentle slap of water meeting water was soothing and he found himself blinking sleepily, lulled to dozziness in the rocking arms of the ocean pool. A resort in the Maldives had not been Cadman's first choice for a solo vacation – hey, he would get the chance to meet up with long-distance friends a bit later on – but he certainly did not find himself regretting the warm sun and clear waters.

Cads swam to the edge of the natural pool and propped his arms up on the boardwalk so that he could peer over, water dripping from his fur to darken the pale wood. Salt water made his nose twitch and he fought down the urge to sneeze, soaked fur sticking to his body. On the top side of the water, the heat beat down upon him as if daring him to submit and he growled softly, the mewl nearer that of a kitten than a wildcat. He was more used to his home in the US than this tropical climate and still found it difficult to adjust to the temperature even as sunshine washed over his fur.

He kicked his hind paws lightly beneath the water, which was so clear and blue that he could see right down to the sandy white on the bottom. Silver fish flickered by in a school that moved almost too quickly for the eye to see and was gone as soon as he took note of them. Light brown fur wafted away from his body beneath the surface, floating away from his skin as if he was perfectly dry or even freefalling. Darker stripes ran down his grey-brown fur and he rubbed his nose into his arm, tongue snaking out mindlessly to bathe his own fur in long, soothing laps. Cads' ears slanted to either side of his head as he relaxed, muscles unknotting as his environment did most of the work for him.

So lost was he in his reverie that he failed to pay attention to the otters sprawled upon the red and white striped deck chairs some distance away. Though they were male and female, the duo were similar in size and appearance, whiskers trembling in like fashion. Living practically in each others back pockets, the twins knew the other more intimately than they knew themselves. Jayne flaked out on the sun bed and rolled her body into a sinuous arch to an extreme extent that only the flexibility of an otter could make to appear natural. Sighing softly as the sun gleamed on her fine, brown fur, she pushed her sunglasses up her muzzle, balancing them there as the clips that would normally hold them in place on her head dangled loosely to the side.

Her twin brother, Sean, was far less relaxed than she, tail slapping the side of the sun bed several times in swift succession. The male, who wriggled his toes every two seconds, shifted his weight as his eyes darted between his book and the pool, though his mind was not on the water. Salt dried into his fur and he shook his head, hunching his shoulders forward as he struggled to focus, an uncomfortable swelling between his thighs making movement unwholesome. He should really have slipped into the water to hide his embarrassment yet he couldn't bear to move and lose his view of the feline drifting oh so near.

He tried not to look, he really did. He would have told anyone such in hindsight. Yet, in the moment, the temptation was too great and the otter groaned, perking up his sister's ears. Sean popped his muzzle up over the top edge of his book, nose quivering anxiously as he tried to look as if he was not really looking.

“You see him?” He whispered, voice carrying more than he intended: the otter winced.

Heaving a sigh, Jayne propped herself up on one elbow and peered over the top of her sunglasses, rolling her brown eyes as if she had seen the display a thousand times before. Sean shook his head and scrambled over his sun bed to sit pressed to his sister's legs, muscles trembling in nervous excitement that had him chirping like a cub all over again. He prodded his sister's thigh with a high pitched giggle.

“Don't look!”

“I'll look if I want to, Sean.” She rolled her eyes and sat up straighter, staring boldly at the wildcat that was yet to take note of them. “He's busy anyway. Ogle all you want, sweet brother of mine.”

Sean licked his lips, pink tongue flicking out over a nose as black as the ocean depths.

“What if he sees?”

He almost sounded as if he wanted the feline to see, to turn his head and lock those piercingly blue eyes with his, allow him to fall into their depths. He had watched in the restaurant and near enough been caught staring the previous night, wondering just how the feline would feel moving over his back, his cock nudging open his tail hole to plunge in with a slick thrust. Sean squirmed and pressed a paw between his thighs, only sparing a partial glance for his sister. To him, there was little point in imagining and the thought stirred sadness in his belly, frustration rising up as he leaned forward, aching to get to his paws and move. He wouldn't do it, however, not even if he tried. He would never make the first move, though he would imagine how it would go over and over again. Sean would play out a scene perfectly in his head exactly the way he wanted to go and yet never lift a paw to put it into action.

Keeping a careful eye on her brother and judging just when she needed to step in, Jayne stretched out the kinks from her arms with an overhead stretch, bosom rising up within her black bikini top as if to show off her femininity. In the beauty of the Maldives, she could have been a goddess from the ocean.

“You're going to burn a hole in his trunks staring like that.”

He whipped his head around, eyes darkly accusing.

“You said it was okay to look!” He snapped as Jayne scooted closer to him, a wicked smirk dancing upon her lips, so subtle that he could have missed it if he had been anyone other than her brother.

“Sure it is – where was there ever any harm in looking?” Jayne counted, slinking an arm around his waist as she sat beside him on the edge of his sun lounger. “It's the getting caught that's the fun part. And all that comes after, dear Sean...”

She pushed his book down to a point where it tumbled on to the wooden boardwalk with a soft thud of pages.

“What if he sees?” Sean repeated with a wriggle that pushed his rump into his sister’s hip.

Leaning in closer, Jayne rested her chin on his shoulder, breath tickling the otter’s rounded ear.

“Then he knows you’re interested.”

“I don’t even know if I want him to know I’m interested yet!”

Wickedly, Jayne nudged her twin’s book closer to the edge of the boardwalk with one bare hind paw, pushing it cruelly close to the edge. Heart pounding, the male otter’s eyes shot wide, his body in motion before his mind caught up. Squeaking, he half-lunged for it, pausing with his paw a fraction of an inch from it as he caught sight of a feline head turning and a pair of eyes landing squarely upon him. The otter gulped and closed his eyes as waves slapped the boardwalk, water sloshing off Cads’ body as he pulled himself seamlessly from the water some distance down the boards.

Jayne sat back, yanking Sean with her with an arm around his shoulders even as he swiped helplessly for his book. He growled and shot her a look, heart in his mouth as paws padded along the boards, closer and closer. One of these days...

“Leave it! And be quiet!” Jayne sniped, slapping his rudder with her hind paw. “He’s coming by.”

The wildcat stalked along the boardwalk lazily, his stride comfortable as the wooden planks had been fixed to the seabed when the resort had first been built, only maintained as necessary. He flexed his paws, enjoying the warm feel of the wood beneath them, as he approached the otters that seemed to have taken such an interest in him. He had noticed their looks throughout the resort, though it seemed to be relatively quiet in the off-peak season so there were fewer travellers to chat too. They must have been lonely, just the two of them travelling together for a glaze of a heated holiday.

Sean gulped and looked up shyly as Cadman stood near, a smile perking up his whiskers.

“Hello,” Cadman said pleasantly, long tail swishing and dripping water all over the boardwalk. “Are you on holiday together?”

Jayne jabbed her brother in the ribs, dropping Cads a wink that he didn’t quite catch as he slipped his gaze between the two otters, waiting on an answer. Sean squeaked.

“Y-yes, we are,” Sean answered after a pause that was longer than necessary, blood rushing to his cheeks: thank the heavens for fur! “We come here every year, whenever we can.”

“I guess the open water is a lure,” Cads agreed, flicking his ears. “If that’s not too forward to assume, that is. Are you two brother and sister?”

Sean bobbed his muzzle so slightly that the motion could not be discerned by the casual eye. Sighing, Jayne slunk her arm closer around his body and leaned into him, tilting his muzzle up with one paw so that he looked the kindly concerned wildcat in the eye.

“Twins.” Jayne answered for Sean, arm squeezing tighter around his waist to rest her paw on the curve of his hip. “We tend to take our holidays together. We’re very...close.”

“That’s nice,” Cadman rubbed the back of his neck, muscles flexing as he twisted his lips in thought. “Say, would you like to join me for dinner tonight? I’m on my own, you see, and it would be great to have some company.” He paused. “That’s not weird, right?”

“Not weird at all,” Jayne purred, flicking out her tongue to lick her lips. “We’d be delighted to join you...”

She paused, expectancy stretching out between them.

“Oh!” The wildcat chuckled to himself. “Cadman. But you can call me Cads, it’s what I usually go by.”

“Nice to know who we’re talking to,” Jayne smirked, nudging her brother as if to prompt him into action.

“What? Um...” Sean shook himself. “Yes. I’m Sean. This is Jayne too. Dinner would be nice.”

He glanced at his sister as if for confirmation that that would indeed be nice and she nodded, kissing his cheek. Her perfume tingled in his nose and he shifted, resting a trembling paw on his opposite knee to shield the bulge in his tight swim trunks. Though they were bone dry, they still accentuated his ‘package’, as they said, to an uncomfortable degree. Jayne, of course, was the one who had given them to him as a present and subsequently insisted that he wear them for, well, the majority of their holiday together, as was her way.

Cadman stepped back, heel brushing the edge of Sean’s book. He looked at it with a raised eyebrow as if surprised to see a book sitting where it could so easily tumble into the water

“By the way, best keep this safe.”

Cads leaned down to pick up, tail flicking up higher over his rump as he did so. The otter’s eyes strained and he leaned forward, only held more or less in place on the sun lounger by the iron grip of his sister, who desperately attempted to hide her growing smirk at his desire. He couldn’t drag his eyes away, the poor cub. The damp fabric clung to the cat’s toned backside as he collected the paperback and straightened again fluidly, unaware of the effect he had had on a certain little otter.

“Here you go,” Cads said, extending his paw to hand the book to Sean. “Don’t want that getting wet now, I’m sure.”

His fingers brushed those of the otter’s as he passed the book back and Sean’s whiskers twitched. The feline’s touch was electric and the otter gulped loudly as he pulled his paw away, silently nodding his thanks with a muzzle ducked down to his chest, unable to look Cads in the eye. Jayne giggled musically, rudder thumping the sun lounger as her fingers massaged slow circles into the curve of his waist, bulge pushing up behind his carefully placed arm. He hoped the feline did not notice and prayed to any listening gods that he would not require Sean to move anymore, lest he see exactly what he was hiding!

Cads was too genuine to take Sean's quietness as anything other than true shyness so he waved a paw and turned on his heel, long tail swishing gently as he padded away. He purred, flexing his toes against the warm wood and, as the salt dried on his fur, considered a short workout in the resort gym before retreating to the steam room and adjoining facilities for some much deserved spa therapy. It may very well have been the Maldives but Cads wasn't about to skip a session when the facilities allowed. Just a light cardio routine or something with circuits to keep his muscles active and listening. He'd hate to waste time when lazy, long days stretched out before him in the summer sun.

Watching him walk away, Sean whimpered and licked his lips, mesmerised by the tight swimwear gleaming over the wildcat's perfect arse. His trunks tented further and in his mind's eye he imagined the Jayne sighed loudly and drummed her hind paws upon the boardwalk, one eyebrow raised as if to query what on earth her brother was doing – a question she asked of herself frequently.

"What are you waiting for?" His sister hissed, paw suddenly tight around his wrist as she leaned in, shaking her head, lips pursed disapprovingly. "You're letting him get away!"

"Get away?" Sean blinked. "But we're meeting him...meeting Cads for dinner later. How is that letting him get away?"

Jayne raised both eyebrows and waggled them suggestively, rising half to her hind paws.

"Oh, sweet brother of mine... Why meet him for dinner when you can have him now?"

Jayne smirked, leaping to her hind paws as her rudder swung behind her.

"Let us be off!"

She sprang into a light run, dragging her brother behind with a less careful yank of his paw. Jayne didn't take into account his 'state' and chuckled to herself as she sped up into a sprint, glasses tumbling off her head to disappear into the clear waters, never again to be worn on her muzzle. Sean wheezed for breath, simply struggling to keep up as his mind tried to catch up with his body, legs not working as they should have with a hard-on between his thighs. Thankfully, his cock softened as he ran, making the movement easier and his arousal less obvious to the casual eye. But Jayne knew how his blood sang for that wildcat. She always knew. It was why he was so grateful for her egging him on and setting him up with partners. His heart thudded painfully against his ribcage and nervous energy gave speed to his paws. Leaning into his run, he overtook Jayne and laughed wildly, flying between sky and sea in a demonstration of sinuous otter sprinting.

"Jayne!" Sean threw a laugh to the wind, caught up by her wild spurt of action. "You'll have to race me, Jayne! Catch me if you can!"

"You brat! After –"

Her words were whipped away as his paws pounded the boardwalk, closer and closer to the island with white sand and overgrown greenery that could have delved into leagues upon leagues of tropical jungle. In all truth, however, one could walk around the island in less than an hour, if at a swifter pace, and Sean had circled it at a run and at a languid front crawl swim on more than one occasion. As much as he loved to run, there was nothing that could compare to swimming. Or sex underwater. That particular act was the very best of all. His crotch stirred in memory, shaft thickening within his trunks, revealing the rod of otter flesh as he closed in on the island, eyes bright.

Running was always better when he had a quarry. Like the whippy tail of a silver fish, he narrowed his eyes as the wildcat's hind paws met sand, oblivious to his pursuers. The hotel was set some height up from the beach, steps leading up to the single door beach entrance, which was so placed so that it would be safe when the waters grew high and rough. Furs could never be too careful when it came to tropical storms after all. Unfamiliar with this part of the resort, Sean slowed to a walk, letting his sister catch up as his nose twitched and he quested back and forth.

Where had that cat gone? He couldn't have lost him so quickly!

"Health club, silly ott'," Jayne chided him as she darted past, lighter than he as she took the lead.

Cadman hummed a tune to himself as he wound through the resort's corridors, enjoying the peace. He could only imagine what a bustle it would be in the peak months but, for now, the place was inhabited by only a few scattered furs. The gym would be even more of a haven than the warm outside and he purred as the air conditioning eased the burn of heat from his skin. Sometimes a cat could enjoy the sun a little too much, but that was a very feline problem to have.

He pushed open a side door marked with a male figure, adjusting the waistband of his swimming briefs in what he hoped was a modest fashion, even though there was no one to see anyway. Padding into the gym's locker room, he rolled his shoulders, muscles pumped with blood after his swim. It was the best time to warm up and work out, then perhaps go for another lazy float in the rolling waves later on. Cads smiled to himself and purred, making his way to his assigned locker for his stay, key tucked into the hidden pocket: a handy design really.

Glancing back instinctively over his shoulder at a light noise, he furrowed his brow to see two very familiar otters standing there, Jayne's chest heaving for breath a side more than Sean's. The male otter drew himself up tall and bold, body angled slightly to the side with a coy smile that seemed designed to lure Cads in. The wildcat gulped and shook his head, clearing it of uncouth thoughts. Why, he had only just met them. And they were twins! Related!

"Are you two following me?"

He smiled genuinely, the tip of his tail twitching gently. He couldn't think anything bad of the twins, not when they had been so pleasant to chat to. But there was something in Jayne's eyes that made him hesitate for the fraction of a second that it took for the locker room door to swing closed behind them.

Grunting, he leaned against his locker and rubbed the back of his head, fingers scratching through his mop of hair, ruffled from swimming.

“I’m just going to workout, I’m not going to disappear,” he tried to assure them, eyes darting from side to side as he struggled to discern what they wanted. “Six o’clock all right with you?”

The female otter raised an eyebrow, tugging the strap of her bikini top down over her shoulder so that it clung to muscle, defined in her lean yet strong form. Cadman licked his nose, wondering how many years of swimming had gone into that taut body. Likely a lifetime.

“But, sweetie...” Jayne fluttered her eyelashes. “We have a much better workout for you to try today.”

“A better workout?” He brightened up and straightened, a smile gracing his muzzle. “Well, I’m always up for that. What did you have in mind?”

“Sure...” She played along, eyes dancing at his cluelessness. “How do you feel about...double teaming?”

Cads nodded, keeping quiet for concern that she would cotton on to the fact that he didn’t know what she was talking about. Double teaming? Was that like spotting? Or a workout partner? But there was three of them, so how the hell would that work? In timely answer to his unspoken questions, Jayne pushed Sean gently in the small of the back, making the otter step forward, eyes dark and lips parted. He panted, narrow chest rising and falling rapidly.

“Go on, Sean,” she murmured encouragingly.

The otter stalked forward with a sway to his hips that could not be accidental, folding to his knees when he was within a foot of the startled feline. Holding his paws up as if not knowing what to do in the moment of surprise, Cads was too shocked to react as the otter yanked down his tight swimming briefs around his ankles, freeing his soft, flesh-coloured shaft. The feline growled softly in the back of his throat, taking an automatic step back so that his shoulders were flush with the lockers, eyes wide as Sean wrapped his paw around the soft shaft and stroked his tongue over the cat’s balls. Cads mewled and half-closed his eyes, tail swishing restlessly as the otter worked his magic, tongue tracing up the length of his cock as it swelled in the smaller paw, ready and as eager as its tease.

Chest heaving, Cads looked down at the otter, hips gyrating gently as he tried to take stock of what was happening. Something in his mind told him that he should exercise caution but as blood rushed to his length that little voice was swiftly overruled in favour of far more carnal pleasures. Jayne advanced with a predatory gleam to her eye, paw dipping into her bikini bottoms as she bit her lower lip and thrust two fingers into her sex. Her juices squelched out noisily around her fingers, betraying her arousal, and she moaned.

It did not take much persuasion for the feline’s shaft to rise fully hard into the eager otter’s muzzle, rubbing against the side and pushing over his lapping, flicking tongue. Adjusting to the situation – why not go with it? He was not against any kind of holiday fun to say the very least of his attitude – Cads grinned and rested a paw on Sean’s head, guiding his parted lips to the head of his shaft. If he had an eager pet on his knees, he would be sure to use the cute boy as he well deserved!

“Mmm... Well, well...” Cads huffed and rolled his hips out and away from the lockers, sliding deep into Sean’s muzzle. “If I’d’ve know this was what you were after...otter...I would have bent you over the boardwalk right there by the water. A needy pet deserves to be satisfied, after all.”

Sean trembled, the words thrumming through ever submissive bone in his body. Stretching his lips as wide as he could around the feline’s smooth shaft, the otter dove down, taking Cads in to the back of his throat with one lusty gulp. He twitched, struggling to keep the cat there as he toyed with his gag reflex, and brought his paws up to the feline’s balls, massaging them with both paws with a reverent groan. Slinking up behind him, Jayne pressed her now bare breasts to her brother’s paw, reaching around underneath his stomach to pump his shaft with one paw. Groaning around the cock in his muzzle, Sean bucked his hips and bobbed his head quickly, tongue squeezed close to the underside of the feline’s shaft. It had been too long since he had had such a nice, thick cock driving over his tongue.

Eyes up to Cads’, Jayne cast him a smouldering stare and the cat’s dick twitched, sending a spurt of pre cum straight to the back of Sean’s throat where it was quickly swallowed. She slipped out of her bikini bottoms and circled her clit with the tip of a finger, eyes still locked with his. Her desire burned.

Lips quirking up in a smile, Cads patted Sean on the head and pulled his cock away, wiping off the string of saliva on the otter’s cheek.

“Thanks for getting me ready, pet.”

Sean did not know what the feline meant until he felt himself being firmly pushed to the side, watching with bated breath as Cads dropped his sister to all fours. Dipping his muzzle down to her backside, he purred and lapped over her tail hole and pussy, tasting her intimately as the otter thrust back, her rump pushed high. She was every inch the image of a lustful female and Cads was not about to disappoint her.

He spun her around so that her shoulders pressed to the tiled floor and drew her legs up, wrapping them around her waist as he speared into her slowly, letting each inch sink into her pussy under Sean’s riveted gaze. Moaning loudly, Jayne flung out a paw for her brother, scrabbling for his paw as he moved closer and gripped it tightly, unable to drag his eyes from the scene as he stroked his shaft. Though an otter could not be left out of the action and it was what his temporary dom – he shivered erotically at the thought, fur fluffing up in a line down his back – wanted of him. His time would come soon, even if he already had an aching hard-on.

Squirming underneath his sister, Sean held her tightly and caught her lips in a lustful kiss, tongues flicking between their muzzles as Cads rutted her to a quick orgasm that shook her body. So teased by the lusty otter, the feline was not far behind and spread his knees apart as he drove into her, taking his cues from Jayne’s encouraging moans and yelps, cried out between exchanging kisses with her brother. Harder and deeper, he fed her the entire length of his dick until he felt the tip bottom out against her cervix, as deeper as he could go with his crotch flush to her pussy. His balls tightened up ever so slightly against his body as he sarled, lips curling back in a playful show of dominance, hammering in for their joined pleasure as orgasm crashed down on him with the force of a tidal wash, overpowering his senses.

Shuddering bodily as he spent himself in the bucking otter, Cads' ears pricked to attention – a sound that he could not ignore even in the throes of lust, cock pulsing. Another fur padded through from the gym to the showers, dousing himself in a stream of fresh running water as he whistled a tune to himself. The feline chuckled breathlessly: what would a stranger do if he walked in on them? Though he had asked himself that question once that day already as the otter took his cock into his muzzle, a stranger to him, more or less. Strangers had come through well for him then. He tapped Jayne on the shoulder as her brother yipped and ground his cock against her arse, pre cum streaking her fur. It was not the time or the place to continue their liaison, though Cads now knew that Jayne had been very right when she had said that she had a different workout for him. As sweat soaked his fur, he winked at the otters looking up at him, drawing his cock from Jayne's wet pussy with a slurp of mixed sexual fluids, drooling out on to the floor.

“You're coming back upstairs with me, my sweet pets.”

*

Later that night, sprawled on his canopy bed with an otter's muzzle wrapped around his cock. Cads long had lost track of who was sucking him off or who he was fucking, except when he sank into Jayne's hot pussy, that was. There was nothing that could mistake that feeling. Sean's tail hole was a treat indeed too, even if that foray had taken a great deal of lube and teasing with a whimpering partner. A light breeze wafted the curtains into the room and a thousand stars danced on the water visible through the flung open screen doors, lending the room an otherworldly air. With the twins, it was a place where anything could happen.

Jayne arched over Cads, breasts hanging down in teardrops as she smiled in a flash of sharp, fish-catching teeth. Drawing her into a deep kiss, Cads growled as their tongues fought for dominance between their muzzles and he flipped her over on to her back, driving into her dripping pussy – how many times had he cum inside her? – with a lusty groan. The otter squeaked beneath him, submitting to his strength and squirmed, pushing her hips up as if to beg for more, deeper, harder, faster. The wildcat grinned and squeezed one breast, a good pawful, as his other paw dropped to her crotch, rubbing her clit as he thrust, tail flipped up.

Sean took his cue like a pro and nuzzled beneath the feline's tail, tongue lashing out over Cads' tight pucker of a tail hole. Moaning softly, the otter wriggled his nose into Cads' plush undertail and wormed his tongue inside, lost in the moment as he wriggled his tongue deeper, adoring how Cads' tail hole squeezed around his tongue. To such an otter, loving base pleasures of the flesh, it was little short of heaven. He would have to thank Jayne in a very special, brotherly way later for putting him in touch with the cat. For hours upon hours would he show her just how thankful he was. He shivered at the thought, cock hard and wanting.

He licked his lips and reached back to Sean, claiming his attention with the light brush of his paw across the top of the otter's head. Nuzzling up into the palm of the wildcat's paw, the otter licking adoringly, lapping over Cads' tail hole as the feline's tail tickled his nose. The cat grinned, teeth showing in a flash of white by the moonlight.

“Down on all fours, pet,” he murmured, needing no greater volume to convey his quiet command. “Tail up.”

The otter mewled delightedly and flung himself on the bed, elbows on the rumpled bed spread and rump thrust high, rudder flipped back over his lower back. Peering back cheekily over his shoulder, he swayed his rump enticingly from side to side, tail hole gaping ever so slightly with the stretch of earlier penetration. It would take some time for the ring to tighten up again though he longed for the lingering soreness that didn’t allow him to sit down for days, refusing to let him forget just what he had been doing and with whom. Leaning in, Cads eased over his back, taking his time as he ground his cock between the otter’s rear cheeks, sliding back and forth with tantalising slowness. Sean whined and arched back further, desperately begging with whimpers and yips for the filling he craved.

Mounting the tight otter for what would not be the final time that night, Cads bared his teeth and growled playfully, making his pet for the night melt beneath him. His sister dipped below the male’s stomach, tongue playing across his hard and aching member, drawing drops of pre cum from the tip even though the poor otter had long lost count of how many times he had cum that night. Cads was, however, certain of one thing as he drove in deep, hips shuddering in close as he held Sean’s tail out of the way with the back of his arm.

The remainder of his holiday was going to be better than he had ever imagined.